“ I spent 3 half days with her in July 2016 because she administered a standardized test to my then 5 yr old son, who I homeschooled at that time. She was obviously well educated, intelligent but soft spoken and so humble. And because she accidentally dialed my number quite a few times after that, we ended up having conversations here and there. She would give me advice on how to encourage my son to love learning and how to teach him more effectively. Four weeks before she passed, she accidentally dialed my number again and I had the God given privilege of reconnecting with her one last time. She was, like before, kind and sweet but with incredible inner strength. She was first and foremost, a servant of God and was was ready to submit to His will even to that day. I feel so blessed to have met her. I am sure she is rejoicing now.
